

FACTORS INFLUENCING ETHICAL PERCEPTION OF ACCOUNTING STUDENTS

THESIS

DEPARTMENT OF ACCOUNTING FACULTY OF ECONOMICS ANDALAS UNIVERSITY

By:

AZIZAH DZUFA

1810532026

Thesis Advisor:

Dra. Husna Roza, MCom(Hons), Ak.,CA

Submitted as Partial Fulfillment of the Requirement for Undergraduate Degree in Accounting

PADANG

2022

ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine the impact of education, gender, ethical orientation, love of money and personality on the ethical perception of accounting students. The samples of this study are taken using simple random sampling which results in 80 accounting students of Andalas University. The study uses primary data which is gathered by using questionnaires and then quantitative method is utilized in order to analyze the data collected. The results show that that education, gender and love of money all have a significant impact on the ethical perceptions of accounting students. On the other hand, ethical orientation does not significantly impact the students' ethical perception.

Keywords: ethical perception, education, ethical orientation, love of money, gender, accounting students

