CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

From the analysis, the writer found several conclusions. Firstly, in the romance short stories we can see that the pursuit of desire done by the subjects caused by their loneliness so they need to find someone to be loved and spend their life with. Newt wants to pursue Catharine to get married with and live together with, the same as Helene, who feels lonely and falls for Harry to be together with and to fill her emptiness or loneliness.

Secondly, we can see that in science fiction the subjects are chasing their desire of freedom and peace that makes them fight the government rules which is not good for humanity. The main characters want the peace and freedom of the society. On the other hand, the government tends to rule the country without noticing the thing which is truly needed by the citizen. For instance, the rule of the equality makes the citizen suffer and lose their freedom to express themselves. Furthermore, the government’s obsession of war puts humanity in danger and becomes not safe.

Thirdly, from the analysis we can see that all of the subject in both of the genre are pursuing their desires. Moreover, there are two kinds of output as the result of their pursuit. While in Romance the parsed result gives the benefit for personal needs like longing toward someone’s love or to have someone to spend their life together with. In other hand, the pursuit result in the science fiction short stories gives the benefit of people in general, people in the form of freedom and peace such as peace and freedom.

Lastly, from the application of the “canonical narrative schema”, we can see that there is a difference between the contract in science fiction short stories and the romance short stories. The main character of the romance short stories keeps on doing one contract constantly, while the main character of the science fiction short stories tends to against the government by breaking the first contract regarding the obligation and makes the second contract to pursue their desire.

However, the main thing that relates both of the genre is that all of the main characters are pursuing their desire in the story.
