ABSTRACT

In this thesis, the researcher discussed the use of metaphor of moods in conversations between the host (Oprah Winfrey) and guest star (Michelle Obama) on Oprah's talk show entitled Vision Tour Visionaries: Michelle Obama Interview. This study aimed to find out what kinds of metaphor of moods are used in the talk show, and what is the speaker's purpose in using these metaphor of moods by separating in-congruent and congruent forms. The researcher analyzed using the Metaphor of Moods theory developed by M.A.K Halliday. The data are sourced from the language used on the Oprah's talk show Vision Tour Visionaries: Michelle Obama Interview. From the results of data collection, the researcher found 24 mood metaphor data which were grouped into 4 parts. The classifications of the forms not congruent were divided into 4 parts and their percentages, namely: 1) Questions were realized in a declarative mode of 70.9%; 2) The declarative mood was responded with declarative mood of 20.9%; 3) The imperative mode was responded with the imperative mood of 4.1%; and 4) The interrogative mode was responded to with a declarative mood of 4.1%. The metaphor of moods here intends to make the conversation more intimate and enjoyable.
