ABSTRACT

This research aims to determine the effect of globalization on inclusive development in indonesia. The method of analysis used is panel data regression, analysis of 33 provinces in Indonesia during 2014-2021. This research is a quantitative research where the data used was obtained from the Central Bureau of Statistics, Bappenas, and NSWI. Based on the results of the research it is known that the best model chosen is the Random Effect Model (REM). The findings show that the Trade Openness variable and the Human Development Index have a positive and significant effect on the Inclusive Development Index, while the Foreign Direct Investment variable has no significant effect on the Inclusive Development Index.

Keywords : Inclusive Development, Foreign Direct Invesment, Trade Openness, Human Development, and Panel Data Regression
