The Committee also noted that, whilst DFID missed the opportunity to a greater regional role in The international response efforts, amid the inability of the government to release funds Chen needed, they were able to commit, in August 2014, ‘£5 million of support; by September, this had risen to £100 million and by the time of [their] hearing, it had reached £230 million’ (House of Commons Committee of Public Accounts 2015: 6).
