Metaphors play a curcial role in enhancing the understanding language and communication. When people encounter an unfamiliar or abstract idea, metaphors help by connecting it to something that people already know, thus facilitating comprehension. The benefits of metaphors in understanding utterances can simplify complex concepts. Metaphors allow the abstract ideas to be conveyed in familiar terms. For example, describing time as money (saving time or spending time) simplifies the abstract concept of time by linking it to something people understand well. By understanding metaphors, it can create emotional resonance. Metaphor evoke emotions more effectively than literal language. For example, she had a heart of stone. This example can convey a sense of coldness and emotional distance in a much more evocative way than simply saying she was unkind. The other benefit of metaphors in understanding utterances is it can clarify ambiguous or abstract sentences. Metaphors can bridge gaps in understanding when a literal explanation might fall short. For example, explaining the mind as a computer helps clarify its complex processes by comparing it to something more tangible and familiar.

In conclusion, the most dominant type of metaphor found in the drama television series Euphoria is ontological metaphor. There are 17 sentences contains ontological found in this drama series. Followed by 4 orientational metaphors and 4 structural metaphors.
