ABSTRAK

This study examines The Development Of The Nagari Sungai Pua Library, Located In Agam Regency, From Its Establishment In 2009 To 2021. The main focus of the research is to understand how library has grown and evolved into one of the central hubs for education and literacy in the nagari community. The library is not only seen as a place to read, but also as a social institution that plays an important role in empowering the local community.

This research applies the historical method, which includes the stages of heuristics, source criticism, interpretation, and historiography. Data were collected from various sources, including written documents, archives, and interviews with community figures and library managers. The establishment of the Nagari Sungai Pua Library was based on the Decree of the Walinagari Sungai Pua Number 04 of 2009. Since then, its development has continued through collaboration between the nagari government, local residents, and overseas community members.

The findings show that the library's growth has been strongly supported by the enthusiasm of the local community and contributions from various parties, including organizations of overseas residents. Numerous literacy programs have been implemented, and the library's facilities have improved over time. One of its major achievements was being named the Best National Village Library in 2019. These results highlight that the success of a village library is largely determined by strong collective commitment and synergy among all elements of the nagari.
