

CHAPTER IV CONCLUSION

There are numbers of significant points of the issue of alienation that Salinger represents in the novel.

First, Salinger depicts that the issue of alienation as the result of turbulent times in human experience, especially in the life of adolescents. Throughout the story, Salinger implies that adolescent who is experiencing turmoil feelings, such as; sadness, fury, disappointment, grief, eventually place himself in a state of alienation as a mark of defensive attitude. In other words, Salinger delineates that alienation is a form of boundary of an individual towards other people.

Second, Salinger portrays that the issue of alienation have some influences towards the person who emotionally unstable. Salinger addresses that alienation has an important part in influencing the development of one's personality which emerge particular behavior. Also, Salinger implicitly depicts that alienation creates an unsteady mind of a person.

Third, Salinger suggests that there are two main causes of being in a state of alienation, namely; suffer from loss or grief, and unfulfilled expectation. Salinger in the story represents the effects as Trauma and mind manipulation.

Lastly, the writer realize that this research is not perfect and is not fully correct as it should be. However, the writer have tried to do the best. In this part, the writer also gives suggestion for further research on this topic. The writer suggests to find out the comprison between alienation in the context of sociology analysis and alienation in pyschoanalysis context. The next researchers on this topic can go with that suggestion. Finally, the writer hope that she could make a better analysis in the future.

